Parking fees up; employees still get free decals

The cost of a University parking decal is going up, but faculty and staff will continue to receive a parking decal as a fringe benefit of employment.

Jean Yarnell, associate director of the parking and traffic division of Campus Safety, Security and Parking Services, said the fee for 1982-83 parking decals will be raised to $25, the same rate assessed five years ago, before a series of parking fee reductions. The Board of Trustees approved the increased user fee in its May meeting.

Yarnell added that this year all faculty and staff must obtain a new decal. The process for doing so will be announced later this summer. Departmental budgets probably will not be assessed the decal fee for their respective employees until September, Yarnell said.

Employees who wish to obtain a decal for a second car, at their own expense, may do so for $15.

The increase in parking user fees is expected to provide an additional $20,000 revenue for parking services, which operates as an auxiliary unit. Plans for the coming year include adding bicycle racks on campus as well as maintaining and repairing existing parking areas. Resurfacing is planned in faculty/staff lots A and J; commuter lot 3 and visitor lot 17. Improvements also are scheduled in lots 6, 7, 12 and in Center Fraternity Row. In addition, the University has regained use of commuter lot 4 on Pike Street and will be expanding on-campus lot 8, both because of the loss of lot H south, where the new Physical Sciences Laboratory Building is under construction.

Yarnell said the parking and traffic division also will reopen the Visitor Information Booth at the east end of campus next fall. The booth has been closed since the beginning of spring quarter because of budget reductions.

Much of the fee increase, however, will be used to pay a larger general services charge back to the University's operating budget. The general services, or overhead, fee is assessed certain auxiliary units of the University which generate their own income but use University services and facilities.

Rates for metered parking also are scheduled to be raised before the beginning of fall semester, but Yarnell noted that departments still will be able to purchase meter tokens which enable University personnel on University business to park in metered spaces on campus for about five cents an hour. The tokens are available from parking and traffic.

Yarnell also has issued a reminder that parking permits for visitors can be obtained free of charge in advance from parking services by departments or offices which have invited groups or individuals to campus.

Yarnell requests anyone anticipating parking problems to contact the parking and traffic office as soon as possible to accommodate their needs.

Biology thesis wins Sigma Xi award

Scott Belanger, a graduate student in biological sciences, has received an award for excellence in scientific research from the University chapter of Sigma Xi national research honor society.

Belanger submitted the award-winning entry in the society's annual competition for the best thesis in the social and natural sciences. Selected from among five finalists by a panel of four representatives from industry and higher education, Belanger's thesis, on "The Effects of Chrysotile Asbestos on Larval Coho Salmon and Juvenile Green Sunfish," describes his cancer-related research. His project and thesis adviser was Dr. Karl M. Schurr, biological sciences.

A graduate of the University of Wisconsin at Madison, Belanger, of Sun Prairie, Wis., received a master of science degree from Bowling Green on June 12.

Finalists in the Sigma Xi competition included second-place winner John Rossi III of Bowling Green, a doctoral candidate in psychology who studied the effects of stress on the brain hormones of domestic chicks; Barry K. Rosen of Bowling Green, a doctoral candidate in biological sciences whose thesis described research in new aspects of photosynthesis; Lawrence A. Normansell of Bellville, Ill., a master's candidate in psychology who studied the psychological aspects of childhood learning in a play setting, and Laura E. Cummins of New Carlisle, who received a master's degree in geology from Bowling Green last December and presented data in her thesis on the relationship between radioactive waste disposal and changes in the geologic setting.

The finalists were selected by a scholarship screening committee from research theses entered by graduate students from all the University's science departments.

Personnel to take open applications

Beginning Tuesday, June 15, the Office of Personnel Support Services will begin a limited program of accepting open applications for classified employment.

Anyone wishing to place an application on file may do so on Tuesdays only at the personnel office, Room 13, Shatzel Hall. Office hours during the summer will be 7:30 a.m. to noon and 12:30-5 p.m.

Since January 1982, because of restrictions in hiring, applications have been accepted only from individuals bidding on posted jobs.

The personnel office will continue to receive applications for posted job opportunities any day of the week.

Firelands seeks funds for TV equipment

Firelands College is hoping to raise $225,000 by June 15 to finance television equipment that will allow the Huron campus to receive programs beamed from Bowling Green via WBGU-TV.

The funds will be used to purchase television receiving hardware, including antennae, amplifiers, cable and 20 television receivers for use in classrooms and the library. In addition, a 20-foot tower will be erected at the Firelands campus to receive signals on two channels.

Existing transmitting towers in Fremont and Castalia will feed the television signals from Bowling Green to Firelands, which currently has no access to WBGU-TV's programming or services.

An application has been filed with the Federal Communications Commission for permission to transmit between the two campuses. Dr. Algae Adams, dean of the college, has set the end of 1982 as a target date for completion of the television project.

In conjunction with the film showings, an exhibit titled "The New German Film" will open Wednesday, June 16 on the second floor of the Fine Arts Gallery. The exhibition, which traces the development of German film over the past dozen years and is being presented in cooperation with the Goethe House New York and the German Culture Center, includes photographs of contemporary directors, producers, actors and scenes from motion pictures as well as posters. Accompanying texts are in English and German. An extensive catalog in English also is available.

Admission to the exhibit, which can be viewed between 8:30 a.m.-10 p.m. weekdays through July 16, is free.
